PREPOSITION

A REMINDING RHYME

A noun's a person, place, or thing,
or sometimes even time, like Spring.
A verb tells what the subject does,
like "jumps" or "fishes," "is" or "was."
An adjective describes a noun,
like "gray" or "ugly," "rich" or "brown."
An adverb tells you how or when,
like "quietly" or "well" or "then."
A pronoun takes the noun's own place,
like "they" for "children," "she" for "grace."
A preposition leads a noun:
"in bed," "at sea," or "to the town."
Conjunctions are a bridge across two sentences: "but," "and," "because."
The interjections, last of all,
like "oh!" and "OUCH!" are very small.
