

ALLIANCE OF CALIFORNIA TRIBES

Yurok

Wiyot

Members Tribes

Lassen Rancheria

Maidu

Okwanuch Indians

Tamakto Indians

Sinkyone Indians

Wintu

Member Tribes

Bridgeport Indian Reservation

P.O. Box 37
Bridgeport, California 93517
Phone: (760) 932-7083
Fax: (760) 932-7846
E-mail: hic@qnet.com

Chairperson: Gerald Sam
Tribal Administrator: Ken Goode

County: Mono

Tribal Status: Federally Recognized

Membership - Tribe Wide: 112

Membership - Service Area: 44

Membership Criteria: Lineal Descendancy, Blood Quantum, Min. 1/4 and 5 years co-residency

Landbase: 40 Acres

IRA Status: IRA Constitution approved July 21, 1976. Amended Approved 9-22-94

Governing Body: General Council, Tribal Council - Members 18 years or older, 30%.

Elections: Annually in July for staggered terms

Date of Last Election: September 21, 2001

Culture/Language: Panite, Washoe, Miwok, Mono, Shoshone/Nanee, Ute-Aztec, I-

BRIDGEPORT INDIAN COLONY

LOCATION AND LAND STATUS

The Bridgeport Colony spans 40 acres of land adjacent to the community of Bridgeport, California, close to the Nevada border. The term "colony" is used for reservations/land bases located near Euro-American towns, although Bridgeport residents use the term "reservamen." The average elevation of the Bridgeport Colony is about 6,500 feet. The Colony is bounded by the Bodie Hills on the east, alluvial fans on the north and south, by the Bridgeport Reservoir to the west, and the community of Bridgeport to the southwest. The Bridgeport Colony was established by Executive Order on October 18, 1974.

CULTURE AND HISTORY:

Residents of the Bridgeport Colony are members of the northern Paiute people, who traditionally occupied a large area paralleling the eastern slopes of the Sierra Nevada and Cascade ranges from roughly Mono Lake in California to John Day River in Oregon. Paiute-speaking people inhabited parts of California, Oregon, Nevada, Utah, and Arizona. All these culturally spoke a language belonging to the Numic branch of the Uto-Aztecan language family, of which are spoken by peoples from the Great Basin into central Mexico.

The northern Paiutes living around Mono Lake traditionally subsisted by hunting, trapping, gathering native plants, and fishing in area streams and lakes.

After gold was discovered in the Sierra Nevada, in the middle of the 1800s, Paiute people moved out of their traditional territories. This contact sometimes resulted in warfare, as the Paiutes tried to defend their ancestral territory. By the start of the 20th century, less than 5 percent of their lands remained in Indian control. An executive Order established the first Paiute reserve, at Walker Lake in western Nevada, in 1874. Yet many Paiute groups did not go to the reservation or abandon their traditional lands.

The Bridgeport Paiutes have lived on the land adjacent to the town of Bridgeport for several centuries. They were employed in service jobs in the town and also worked as ranch hands. By the middle of the 1930s, many of the northern Paiutes had apparently assimilated the Euro-American lifestyle.

Bridgeport tribal land was threatened in 1968 when a contractor, wishing to build a subdivision, produced a title for the land. Evidently the land patent had been issued illegally to a non-Indian in 1914. This patent disbursement contradicted the Desert Land Act, which prohibited issuing land titles on which the occupants have always resided.

Through their own lobbying efforts, the Bridgeport Paiutes acquired 400 acres of Bureau of Land Management land less than a mile from their camp in 1974. President Ford signed the Bridgeport Bill, which put this land into trust for the Bridgeport Paiute. A few members retain the Paiute language skills, and some practice other traditional art forms. Bridgeport Paiute elders prepare foods, such as acorn or pine nut soup and biscuits. In addition, some residents make traditional bead work, and make arrowheads.

PAJUITE - There are three main groupings of Paiute people: the Northern Paiute, Owens Valley Paiute, and Southern Paiute. Only the first two groups lived in what is now California; they traditionally occupied the eastern slope of the Sierra Nevada, from the northern border with Oregon to the south in the Great Basin, and south into central Mexico and beyond. Traditionally living by hunting and gathering, with some irrigating of areas supporting plants with deep roots. Today about 150 Northern Paiute people live in the Bridgeport Colony, on the Cahuilla Rancheria, and the Fort Bidwell Reservation, while about 2,200 Owens Valley Paiutes live on the Benton, Bishop, Big Pine, Lone Pine, and Fort Independence reservations.

WASHO - The traditional lands of the Washoe people covered an area of more than 1,000 miles centered on Lake Tahoe, on the present California-Nevada border. The Washoe language is a Hokan language related to other California languages and extending from the northern coast of the state south into Mexico and east into the Great Basin and the Southwest. Their way of life was based on desert hunting and gathering, with frequent seasonal movement of bands based on environment. Today over 300 Washoe people live in the Woodfords Indian Colony in Alpine County, the Susanville Rancheria and on private lands in the area.

MIWOK (ME-WUK, MI-WUK, MEWUK) - There are three main Miwok groups - the Coast Miwok, the Central Miwok, and the Lake Miwok, with homelands in north-central California. They lived along the Pacific Coast from present-day San Francisco to Duncan's Point, including Tomales Bay, and San Pablo Bay, inland to the area near Sonoma, the Lake Miwok in to the east and south of Clear Lake; and the Sierra Miwuk lands were located in the Sierras and foothills of the central part of the state. These groups spoke Hokan languages, related to California languages from the north along the coast and extending into Mexico and the Southwest. The coast people depended on tideland gathering of fish and shellfish, with secondary agriculture; the lake people used fish, waterfowl, and other lake foods, as well as acorns. The Sierra people depended on king salmon in the major river valleys, with increasing dependence on game in the foothills. Today many Coast Miwok people live in their traditional area, but on recognized tribal lands; in 1992 they formed an organization to pursue federal recognition. Many Miwok people live today on the Middletown Rancheria. Many Sierra Miwuk people still live on traditional lands, either on the Jackson, Shingle Springs, and Tuolumne rancherias (which have trust lands) and the Sheep Ranch, Buena Vista, and Chicken Ranch rancherias (which have trust lands), or in surrounding areas. There are about 2,500 Miwok people today.

MONO - WESTERN (MONACHE) - The traditional territory of the Western Mono people was in south-central Sierra Nevada foothills. Their language belongs to the Uto-Aztecan language family, related to Paiute and to languages extending eastward into the Great Basin and the Southwest into central Mexico and beyond. Their main food source was acorns, while they depended to a lesser extent on other vegetable foods and game.

SHOSHONE (WESTERN SHOSHONE) - The traditional lands of the Shoshone people are located in the east-central area to the east of the Sierra Nevada, including Owens Valley lands south of it. The Shoshone language is closely related to Paiute and belongs to the Uto-Aztecan language family, spoken throughout southern California, eastward into the Great Basin, and south into Mexico. Traditionally the Shoshone people made a living by desert hunting and gathering in particular areas in small, extended-family groups. Today the fewer than 2,000 Shoshone in California live mainly on the Big Pine, Bishop, Timbisha, and Lone Pine Reservations; individuals live on other locations as well.

GOVERNMENT:

The Bridgeport Tribe and its Reservation is governed by a General Council composed of members 18 years or older, 30 percent of the tribe, and two at-large members, representing the council is presided over by an elected chairperson, vice-chairperson, and secretary. The Tribe's constitution, adopted under the Indian Reorganization Act of 1934, was approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs on July 21, 1976.

Credits:

Selected tribal climate, location, land status, government, history and cultural information included in the Profile was authorized for use in this web site by Tribal Data Resources, Inc., with Tiller Research, Inc. as follows.

Use of data from has been authorized under licensing agreement with Veronica E. Tiller Research, Inc., dated May 27, 1997. "Tiller's Guide to Indian Country - Economic Profile of American Indian Reservations" - Copyright 1996 Library of Congress Catalog Card No. 9601326 ISBN 1-885931-01-8

For more information on Tiller's Guide to Indian Country, contact: Bow Arrow Publishing, Tiller Research, Inc., Albuquerque, NM 1-888-336-8267

BACK

Home | About ACT | Member Tribes | Legislation | News | California Indians | Tribal Links | Contact Us | Help
Copyright ©2001 Alliance of California Tribes. All rights reserved.