Aboriginal populations are those estimated at contact. Most believe that the 1492 populations were as much as twice as high. It is theorized the post-Columbian/pre-contact disease resulted in cataclysmic depopulation.

Populations are projected by the data base for benchmark years entitled Arrival, Year 1700, Year 1800, Year 1900, and Year 2000 for broad analysis purposes. These analyses will be added to this page from time to time.

All benchmark populations are rounded to the nearest 50. Estimated populations of less than 25 are considered zero. Population of unrecognized tribes or bands have been difficult to discern and are not always included in the analyses.
